

I have grave concerns about loosening the broadcast ownership regulations. I believe that the FCC has a responsibility to the public. By limiting the number of stations a company can own, it will give more voices and more choices. One only needs to look at the past few years in the radio business. We hear the same 15 songs on the same 5 radio stations all day and all night. The individuality of the stations has been lost. Now the stations play towards the lowest common factor. Diversity is being lost in the media. Certainly the owners are making enormous amounts of money, but I for one don't enjoy Clear Channel, Disney and Fox all the time. I'd like some other choices when I turn on my television or play my radio. Doesn't public interest play any part into this? Haven't there been enormous amounts of public feedback about this? Please listen!
